In the sciences, master’s students have greater representation of students who identify as female and ethnic or racial minorities than doctoral students.

Overall, there are more master’s students than doctoral students, largely accounted for by the five-fold increase in part time master’s students.