NIH is the nation’s primary funder of biomedical research, leading to advances in scientific knowledge, better health, and economic growth.

NSF is the only federal agency that supports research and education across all scientific disciplines, underwriting scientific training and promoting discovery.

The USDA National Institute of Food and Agriculture funds competitive grants for nutritional and agricultural research, bringing cutting-edge science to complex agricultural challenges.